EDGEFIELD AND AIKEN RAIL ROAD.

Mr. Editor:—We promised in our article in the last number of your paper, to throw out a few hints on the profits likely to arise to this community, by the Rail Road, when completed, from Edgefield Village to Aiken. In our desire to be brief, we will simply furnish an analysis of the subject, leaving it to the practical men of the District to make their own calculations, and draw their own deductions.

The profits may be ranked under two classes. First, those arising directly from the Road: as from passengers, freight, carriage of the mails, and from conveniences of various kinds. Secondly, those arising indirectly by the enhancement of real estate, &c.

Under the first head, let us consider 1st, the prospect for passengers. Even now the most of the travel to Charleston from the upper Districts of the western part of the State, is through the village of Edgefield. There are two lines of stages running from the back country through the Village, and one line we know to be highly profitable. The passengers, most of whom are destined for Charleston, would of course take the Rail Road to Aiken. Again: a great many travellers from the upper part of the State, from East Tennessee, and from the western part of North Carolina, who pass at present through Columbia, would take the Rail Road at Edgefield, as it would bring them a number of miles nearer to Greenville, through which place they pass in their journey to Tennessee and North Carolina. For the same reason, the most of the travel from the lower Districts to the back country for the purposes of summer residence, &c., would be over this Road. When now we add to these, the increase of travel on the Road by the growing population of the Village, and the increase generally which always takes place by multiplying the facilities of travel, we will have a source of profit from the Road of an inconsiderable value. And this is an item of the first magnitude in estimating the profits of a Rail Road.

Second. The prospect for freight. The downward freight from the Village will consist principally of Cotton. Other articles of produce may, and doubtless, will be transported; but as they are likely to be unimportant, will not take them into the estimate. The quantity of Cotton will, of course, depend much upon the growth of the Village; upon the market here established for the sale of this article, and for the purchase of supplies by the planter. It is said that 70,000 bales pass annually through Hamburg in this District. Suppose Edgefield were to obtain a third of this, (and this we think is no unreasonable calculation,) it would give this Road the carriage of more than 23,000 bales, free from all competition. So much for the freight down. The upward freight will surely be greater. It will consist in the first place, of all the merchandise intended for Edgefield Village. (The amount of which is likely to have a gradual increase to suit the increased prosperity of the place,) and most of that intended for the District, but likewise of a great proportion of that designed for the upper Districts, in the western part of the State. When we consider the vast quantity of merchandise necessary for the planters, and for supplying the large number of merchants in the country, this will be no small matter. Superadded to these, the large quantity of merchandise carried at present on wagons from Augusta and Hamburg to North Carolina and Tennessee, will be brought upon this Road.

Third. Profits from carrying the mail. First, we shall have a daily mail from Edgefield to Charleston, which in addition to its great utility and satisfaction, will be a source of considerable revenue to the Road. Secondly, the Western mail, which now reaches us from Augusta by stage only tri-weekly, would be most probably made a daily mail, and would be carried by Aiken on the Rail Road to Edgefield Village.

Fourth. Profits from conveniences of various kinds. To men of practical reflection it is unnecessary to remark that "convenience is profit." The political economist will tell us, that any convenience which serves to save time, labor or trouble, may add to the stock of productive capital. Thus in works on political economy, a mint, the retail store-keeper, the banker, broker, &c., are regarded as labor-saving machines, because they save labor and trouble to the business men of the community. On a much larger scale is a Rail Road a labor-saving machine. It affects more or less, nearly all the interests of society. It hastens communications of all kinds, and thereby saves time. It brings an ample market within nearer limits, and thereby is the immediate saving of capital. But all these savings add just so much to a man's productive capital. Take but a single instance out of a hundred that could be used to illustrate. If the merchant at present pays 50 cents per hundred for freight from Aiken to Edgefield, and can obtain it by the Rail Road for 25 cents, is there not here a clear gain of 25 cents per hundred? True, it is not a great matter to the merchant, but it is to the consumer, the poor planter in the country, who really has freight to pay. With him every sixpence saved is a gain. He reasons correctly when he reasons in the language of the political economist, "The cheaper a person buys what he needs, the less he spends, the more he saves, the greater the amount of accumulated capital to be used hereafter productively." These, then are some of the advantages of the Rail Road, arising from convenience. It saves time, labor, trouble and expense in all classes of the community. In addition to these things, it opens freely the channels of communication with the various parts of the country, and thereby affords the means for moral and intellectual advancement.

New let men of judgment place a fair estimate on the various items of profit above enumerated, and they will discover, in our honest opinion, that the Road will pay a reasonable per cent. on the capital invested without at all having regard to the indirect advantages it may produce. On the indirect profit we will add, Mr. Editor, a few suggestions in our next. We hope, however, some-able pen will take up the subject, and present to the community the results of better digested views, and more exact information.

Mr. Editor.

—The time for action upon the subject of the Rail Road has arrived. Some one is now wanted to take the lead and the people are ready to follow. But who is sufficient for this thing? Where are our old citizens, our counsellors, the bone and sinew of our community? Where are Addison, Butler, Brooks, Jeter, Lipscomb, Pickens, Bland, Holland, and others. I know they are all in favor of this undertaking. This work addresses itself to them for their aid. Why stand they still and talk; talking will never build the road. Twenty hearty fellows standing round a stalled wagon expressing, in the warmest terms, their good wishes for the wagoner's success in getting out of the bog, will never budge his wagon one inch; but coasts off and shoulders to the wheels, and then along push, a strong push, and a push all together, and my word for it, the wagon will soon be under way.

I hope the gentlemen above mentioned will excuse this public reference to them, and that they will come out and make some public demonstration, propose some plan of action, and let us go seriously to work. Let me turn their thoughts back to a man who once lived among them, a man whose worth as a citizen was not fully appreciated till we lost him. I mean Col. Eldred Simkins, Sen., whose public spirit and zeal in all matters relating to the prosperity and improvement of his country were untiring, and whose patriotism manifested itself, not in words only, but in energetic action. Let me call upon them to emulate his zeal. Has not the mantle of Elijah fallen upon some of these men, and will they not come forward and do what that man would long ago have done had he lived to this day? I feel assured they will.

Ma. Editor.—As the new Legislature is just elected, all intelligent persons are interested in knowing what will be their sentiments on the important topics of the present day. The Mexican war, the cleaning out of the Western River, (upon the principles suggested by Mr. Calhoun, in his recent report), and election of Electors by the people, and Governor by the people. These are subjects talked of by gentlemen, and we would like to know the opinions entertained by our Representatives; as the coming Legislature will be called on to act upon all of these. A Governor is to be elected, and also a U. S. Senator, should McDuff resign, which we hope will not be the case. If, however, there should be a vacancy, we think it important that the Legislature should choose a man of ability, whose principles are known to be identified with the leading doctrines which this State has maintained for the last twenty years. We wish to know if the State will choose a Senator who will sustain and carry out those principles, or whether she will select one who will go for internal improvement by the Federal Government, upon principles calculated to tax the people for the benefit of Western waters and Western interests. I think it far more important, that South Carolina should choose at this juncture in our affairs, a man who will go for a strict construction of the Constitution and an economical Government, and who will give a hearty and cordial support to the Administration in its efforts to introduce the principles of Free Trade, and also to support the Administration in sustaining the honor of our country, in prosecuting a war, waged in the first instance, to sustain Southern interests and Southern rights. It is more important to choose a man to sustain these principles, than who the individual—all we want is sound principles, talent and spotless integrity, both private and public, and we think it better for the people of the State to dictate to their Representatives, who shall guard and defend their ancient principles in the Senate of the United States, than to leave it to managers and politicians after they assemble at Columbia.

AN IMPORTANT CURE BY DR. JAYNE'S ALTERNATIVE.

We have been informed by Mrs. Mahan, [grand-daughter of old Gen. Wayne,] that she suffered for a number of years from the growth of a large Gouty Tumor of the Throat, which, besides great deformity, produced both a difficulty of deglutition, and of breathing. In deed, she says, the pressure upon the wind pipe was so great as to prevent her from sleeping in a recumbent position, and often suffocation appeared inevitable. She also labored under severe indigestion from Liver Complaint and Jaundice, with a horrible train of nervous affections, for which she commenced the use of Dr. Jayne's Alternative, which she took regularly for six or seven weeks, with occasional doses of his Sanative Pills; and her general health was thereby completely re-established, and now perceiving some diminution in the size of the Gouty Tumor, she was encouraged to persevere in the use of the Alternative until every vestige of the painful tumor was entirely removed. We think, therefore, that such an important remedy should be more generally known.

The following is from a Physician and a much respected Clergyman of the Methodist Society, dated Modest Town, Va., Aug. 27, 1840.

Dr. Jayne—Dear Sir—I have been using your Expectorative extensively in my practice for the last three years, and for all attacks of Colds, Coughs, Inflammation of the Lungs, Consumption, Asthma, Pains and Weakness of the Breast, it is decidedly the best medicine I have tried. Very respectfully yours,
